

2009 Leo Mid-Year Love Guide

Leo Mid-Year Love 2009 Intro

Dear Leo, what can I say. This rare Chiron/Neptune/Jupiter conjunction, the one so rare it will not occur again until 2239, is hitting your romantic partnership sector. It will not occur in this sector of your chart again until the year 2493. Just think how lucky you are to be experiencing something so few people ever will. Mmmm, yeah right....

This energy will be affecting both singles and those in couples in similar ways.

This energy can be especially intense for later born Leos, as it is opposing your Sun and sapping away your normal confidence in matters relating to affairs of the heart. In fact, you may feel as if your normally strong sexy persona has just dissolved into thin air, rendering you invisible and incapable. To keep reading your sign's love horoscope, see below

2009 Mid-Year Love Overview

We are at such a pivotal stage in human existence. For the past 20 years, its as if the world has been at a cultural stagnation point. The Clinton years of the 90s with their suburban shopping mall consumerism followed by the standstill malaise of fear and loathing of the post-9/11 Bush era saw humanity in a holding pattern of franchised banality. The past year, a number of powerful transits has really made us take stock of who we are and what really counts. We are slowly waking out of a deep stupor. The old power structures are ceasing to hold, and it's really uncertain what will take their place, but it is hopeful to be something more meaningful. There can be sudden sweeping and dramatic change, and things unthinkable even a year ago, are at least on the table now. The period from now until 2012 is really intense with several major rare astrological transits.

As material things get slowly stripped away, it is time to realise what we have left: our hearts and our souls. We will come slowly to live more on these more ethereal vibes, perhaps out of no choice. The years of laughing at homeless people and saying it is their choice are over for a higher united consciousness.

This all rolls down from macro to the microcosm as we as individuals seek to move further away from relationships based on status, external beauty or Stepford domestic duty to something a bit more real and passionate. It is the reemergence of the need to feel. It is a time for new things, new loves, new love models and a new romanticism to take stage. We have been living in a material world with a minimalist emotional aesthete. A lush romantic world awaits us with the seeds being planted now. Think Byron or Bronte. The Jane Austen Renaissance days are over. Mr Darcy make way for Heathcliff.

This summer there is a really rare configuration that is lighting up the skies.

Chiron, Neptune and Jupiter are all aligned in Aquarius, and due to the fact that many of these slow-movers are all stationing retro at the same time, their energy will continue comingling over the course of the entire summer, although its power will slowly start to diminish after the end of July. These planets will all come fairly close together again at the end of the year in December.

To realise exactly how rare this alignment is, these 3 planets will not be conjunct again until the year 2239, and not again in Aquarius until 2439. So what is going is really powerful and special. Conjunctions (when three planets are in the same position in the same sign) can be both stressful and harmonious. They can pave the way for a re-birthing of sorts and can bring powerful new influences in our lives, but also the fear and confusion of change.
