Prologue

Welcome to your Astrology Detective 6-monthlong-term transit report!

First off, please note that all dates are written in the American manner: Month/Day/Year.

A transit happens when a planet directly aligns with a point in your birthchart. Planets also move through the various sectors, or houses, of our birthchart, which is why we go through periods when the focus shifts to a specific area where we are undergoing lots of changes for an extended time.

The outer planets of Saturn, Uranus, Neptune and Pluto all take several years to move through one house. Their transits to particular points in our birthchart are long-term and can last for months (or even years off and on), and should be paid particular attention to. They will help you understand complex issues you are undergoing. If in a challenging aspect (square, opposition and sometimes conjunction) this report will help you understand these energies and work with them in a positive way. If in a harmonious aspect (trine, sextile, and sometimes conjunction) please use this powerful vibe to your advantage while you may; it would be a shame to let this help from the universe slip through your fingers.

Pay particular attention in this report when you see one of these slow-moving planets shift house, or when a transit aspect starts or stops. These will mark era-defining moments in our lives.

Astrology is not our destiny. As you read this report, you will see the manifestations of different transits can be quite broad, and their affects on us are often largely morphed by our own actions and reactions. Astrology is particularly useful because we can see transits coming in advance and prepare for them, thereby defusing their impact on us. For example, if you are aware that you are undergoing a transit that is affecting your money sector, you will know to be vigilant with spending during a period of specific dates. Sometimes just knowing a date a stressful transit ends can bring a lot of comfort, as you will know for certain that "this too shall pass." We often take good times for granted, and Astrology can make us aware of when we are under the influence of incredible good fortune, so we can go out and make the best use of our luck.

One of the saddest things I have seen in my career as an astrologer are the people that have had a bad experience with an unethical practitioner who filled them with fear and fueled them with ideas that made astrology have a negative and undue influence on their lives. When used properly, astrology can only empower us, because even in bad times, it gives us awareness to garner back some control over events in our lives.

While these reports can give you an in-depth look at the effects of various planetary influences, there is only so far a computer-generated report can go. A computer can not analyze holistically, so if you are undergoing two transits with conflicting energies you may be quite confused. For example, you may be undergoing one transit that says you are having a confidence crisis, while another transit may say you feel great about yourself. In these cases, you need to step back and look at the big picture. Life is complex and we often experience contrasting circumstances and experiences at any given moment. We also can often act in conflicting ways at the same time. If you are undergoing particularly difficult contradictory long-term transits that are causing you much pain, hardship or confusion, you may want to use that time to take the plunge and book a reading with a real astrologer. You can always feel free to contact me with your questions, and we can make arrangements to look into them in more depth.

I hope you find this helpful and insightful and I wish you the best!

The meaning of the transiting Jupiter

Jupiter, aka the Gas Giant, is the planet of expansion. It doesn't have it's own vibe per se, but instead reinforces and exaggerates what is already going on. Jupiter is often associated with luck, and if you are receiving a harmonious transit from this planet, you may be amazed by your good fortune. For those that are going through a more challenging aspect, Jupiter's force can be overwhelming, razing down long-standing (and usually stagnant) structures overnight. In the long haul, this may seem like luck, because it will help align you to a better path.

Jupiter is the Roman version of Zeus, the chief God and ruler of thunder and lightening. Getting hit by a bolt out of the blue is a good way of understanding this planet's energy. It may very well seem like a bomb has gone off, leaving one a bit giddy and punch drunk amid the mayhem.

Jupiterian energy has a tendency to push us towards excess, and this includes matters of the ego. We need to be careful that we don't get too cocky during our good times, or too judgmental during our bad ones. Jupiter also rules our greater philosophy on life and all things spiritual – the non-material world. During positive transits, it is a good time to expand one's horizons through study, meditation, or travel. Jupiter helps us understand the world and our place in it.

It takes Jupiter about 12 years to make one complete cycle through the zodiac. Because house sizes vary, and due to retrograde motion, Jupiter may remain in one house for up to two years, although if the house is small, it may take less than one. Jupiter transits to planets in the birthchart may just last a few days or a few weeks, but can be quite intense and powerful, nonetheless.

Transiting Jupiter in your first house

When Jupiter is in the first house there is the tendency to go on a bit of an ego trip. Feelings of invincibility may abound. You are most likely feeling extraordinarily self-confident and assured, but unfortunately to others this could come off as just plain cocky. You need to take extra efforts during this period to keep your feet on the ground and remain in touch with the ordinary mortals around you.

You may shoot to stardom during this period and all eyes will be on you – heaping praise and judgement in equal measure. It may be difficult for you to escape from being the center of attention and gossip during this period. You will have an unstoppable attraction. People will be interested in following your every move, even people that don't like you very much won't be able to turn their attention elsewhere. Others may even set you up as a bit of a straw man - someone they build up, just to beat down to feel better about themselves. If you try to distance yourself, you may appear aloof and standoffish.

During this transit, you should try to remain humble and make every effort to keep in touch in reality. You are feeling so good about yourself and your accomplishments that you are living in a bit of a bubble, cut off from the humdrum world. You need to listen to feedback from trustworthy friends and family who have your best interests at heart. This will be the furthest thing from your mind, because you think everything is great and that you know it all. Once Jupiter moves on from this position, you will wake up from its spell, wondering how you let your ego run rampant. In the meantime, remember, the first house is the house of identity, and you need to be running a smooth PR campaign.

Hopefully, the above doesn't sound too daunting. It shouldn't because your confidence and energy will be so high, you will not feel any self-doubt. Jupiter in the first house transits can be periods of excess and hedonism. Ben Affleck and J Lo had their heady, spendthrift romance when Jupiter was transiting their solar first houses. This is a period they both look back on with a bit of embarrassment and their images still haven't fully recovered.

You may be interested in having a good time during this period, just make sure you meet your responsibilities. Jupiterian excess can also run into food; you will want to watch what you eat or you could gain a lot of weight in a short period.

Transiting Jupiter in your second house

This is a period when the focus is on earned income. It is especially important during this period to pay close attention to the types of transits Jupiter is undergoing, and if they are making harmonious or challenging aspects to points in the birthchart. During a harmonious transit, you may receive a sudden raise or money out of the blue. This would be a good time to negotiate a better salary for yourself. During stressful transits, you may see a sudden decrease in income or even a fight over money that blows quickly out of proportion. During these periods, try to keep your wits about you and do not let your imagination or your emotions flare. Jupiterian transits are relatively brief, and if you see them coming you can be aware of this energy in advance and try to keep your behaviour under control.

In any case, you should try to keep some money on hand for a rainy day. This will be difficult because you will be in a spending mood. During this period, all the extra space in your home may get filled up with the things you buy. This is definitely a "I'll take one in every colour" phase. Try to plan a budget and stick to it. There is nothing wrong with treating yourself to nice things, but don't morph into a shopaholic.

This would be a good time to start your own business and try to make your own income.

The second house deals with worth – both material and self-worth. During this time, money and possessions may take on a heightened meaning as a way to express yourself. You may feel more secure the more you buy. During this period, your sense of self-esteem should be quite solid, and if you were passing through a period of doubt, you could make strides in regards to personal healing. During periods when Jupiter is making a challenging transit, you may feel a bit more anxious or unsure than usual. Realise these transits will be brief and try to weather the storm with your head held high. Also, remember that no amount of material goods will make you feel better about yourself long-term, so put away the credit card.

Jupiter is a generous planet, so you will be in a generous mood, just make sure it is with the right people and not hangers on.

The meaning of the transiting Saturn

Saturn is often seen with fear and loathing in astrology. This is due to the fact that transiting Saturn often brings with it a resulting period of deprivation or hardship in a specific area of our lives. The amazing thing about Saturn, however – and what is often missed – is that it also really forces us to grow up and get our lives sorted and in order. Saturn normally takes about two-to-three years to transit a house in our birthcharts, and during that time we may mature at hyper-warp speed. Saturn likes and rewards hard work. It is all about structure and the building of those structures. The best way to meet Saturn is head-on. When it is transiting a sector of your chart, put all your energies into building a firm a basis in that area of your life.

Saturn takes about 27-to-30 years to transit the entire zodiac, so look at each house shift as the start of a 30-year cycle. Saturn will assist you enormously if you do the hard work it asks of you. Often when working towards our goal, results will be delayed until after this transit is over. It is important to keep your eyes on the prize and keep forging on. You may have to deal with limited resources, but the foundation you build will last a lifetime and be almost impossible to topple.

If you do not meet Saturn voluntarily, the universe will force you to and the transition may be a bit more stressful. It is up to you to be the little pig that builds his house out of stone.

There is one transit of Saturn that is especially important. The so-called Saturn return. This happens when we are in our late 20s, then again in our late 50s. The Saturn Return is one of the most important transits in astrology, and if you are undergoing a transit of "Transiting Saturn conjunct your natal Saturn" you should pay particular attention to that part of the report.

Transiting Saturn in your eighth house

You may need to learn how to go it alone during Saturn's transit of the 8th house. The eighth house represents other people's resources and during this time these may be very limited indeed. Also on an emotional level, if you are used to living in consensus with others, or being a team player, you may find yourself set to sea and have to make your mark all by yourself. If you rely on other people for money, such as a grant, loan or even a spouse or parent, you may find these resources dry up. There may be problems with mortgages or credit, which may be hard to come by. You may be going through some type of separation from a business or romantic partner and have to disengage yourself from their income.

The eighth house represents other people's money and during this Saturn period you will be very aware of how the purse strings can control your quality of life. One good strategy is to clean up this sector of your life. Make only sensible investments; Saturn does not like risk. Pay down your credit and get yourself out of debt. Make sure, even in love, that you have proper and valid contracts that will protect in all partnerships. If you take this sober and rational approach to joint finances, you will be able to reorganize this sector in such a way that you will have control even when the source of money is not your own income.

The eighth house also represents our emotional intimacy with others, and in this area, too, you may feel like you can't get close to others, or you may be reticent to share your feelings openly; you may feel more like detaching yourself. Your partner may take this personally, so try to be aware of this and keep them in the loop. Alternatively, you may be going through a dry period sexually, or a time when your sex life is a bit conventional. Saturn here is teaching you the need for warmth and closeness in companionship. Alternatively, you may be dealing with a clinging co-dependant partner who expects you to devote yourself to their emotional needs, to the point where you feel you don't even exist anymore. Saturn will help you build proper boundaries with people so they do not take advantage of you. The lesson of this transit is to learn what is the appropriate level of closeness and maintain that to have healthy relationships on all levels.

Transiting Saturn in Trine with your Moon

This transit will be defined by emotional stability. You will be able to work out your conflicts and difficulties with others, especially the women in your life, without any unneeded dramatics. The Moon represents the Mother and women in general, and during this time, females can offer you a lot of emotional support and grounding. You will have a knack at handling emotional issues in just the right manner, without causing undue offense to others. This is a time to roll up your sleeves and work hard at constructing positive relationships with those closest to you and resolving any lingering conflicts. You will be able to walk the middle road, neither too detached nor too involved, hitting the right pitch for trust to be established. You will be able to keep your emotions under control in order to defuse any situation where tempers are running high. You shy away from mawkish sentimentality and prefer a more pragmatic approach. This will not lead to detachment, in fact, you will probably garner much respect. You will also be able to keep a work/life balance at this time.

Transiting Saturn in Sextile with your Mercury

You will have a lot of focus at this time and be able to set your mind to finding solutions to any problems you may be dealing with. Your ability to concentrate will be astounding so use this time to catch up on work of an intellectual or nature. This is not a period for brainstorming or creative visualization, but instead a time for problem solving and detail-oriented work that will get the task done.

This is also a good time for team work and collaboration as you are willing to communicate in a constructive manner and listen to input from others. The important decisions you make at this time can serve to establish solid foundations for future growth.

Transiting Saturn in Square with your Venus

You may feel a bit restricted at this time as if it's all work and no play. You may have a lot of obligations, especially to those you love, who may seem especially needy. You long for relations that are filled with fun and escape, but that seems a far away reality. As such, instead of meeting your obligations, you may grow detached and shut yourself off from those close to you. Thus your life becomes a self-fulfilling prophecy: you get moody because you aren't having fun, but your serious vibe is turning fun people away from you. You may be a bit grumpy and feel resentment against those having more enjoyment than you, and instead of joining in the gang, you curse and judge them for their superficiality. You can feel quite isolated and alienated. Alternatively, you may be the needy one, which is making people avoid you like the plague.

Romantically, you may feel a disconnect from love, be it with an existing partner or because you are single. Escaping into work will not make you feel better; it is wiser to try to get yourself out of a rut by going out, even though you don't feel up to it.

A good way to deal with this transit is to make sure you schedule playtime to break up the doldrums, and to make the best of it. Try to meet your obligations and do not expect others to do things that you could do for yourself. Your desire to shirk responsibilities and run away and isolate yourself will only exasperate the problem. If you come out of your protective shell, you may not be as alone as you think.

Transiting Saturn in Trine with your Jupiter

This aspect is quite good for getting things done. You will be able to accomplish a lot without it feeling like work. It is one of those rare moments when work is actually enjoyable. This is also one of those rare times when creative vision and detail-oriented execution go hand-in-hand, a period of both inspiration and perspiration. While you are in an expansive mood, you will be sure not to bite off more than you can chew and be able to take on a lot of responsibility without feeling overwhelmed.

Saturn is the planet of caution while Jupiter is the planet of risk, and you will be able to harmoniously blend these two opposing concepts. This is a good time to go after your dreams, as you will have the focus and enthusiasm to get the ball rolling. People will be quite impressed by your abilities as well as your positive outlook.

Transiting Saturn in Sextile with your MC

from 06/09/2010 until: 07/01/2010

You could move up the career ladder during this time. You may finally get some reward for all your hard work and be recognized for your efforts. This is a time when you should really put your nose to the grindstone because working tirelessly will go a long way to helping you achieve your career goals. It is a time to stay focussed on what is really important to you and attack it until you get it done. This is a time when a more conservative approach can get you farther than an eccentric freestyle jam. You will be able to convey your authority and expertise which will, for those in your workplace and the world at large, make you the one to watch.

The meaning of the transiting Uranus

Uranus is the planet of change, surprise and spontaneity. When it is making a harmonious aspect to your birthchart you can feel as if life is filled with excitement and limitless possibilities; you may have sudden strokes of great luck and your world could be filled with colourful and interesting individuals. Uranus is positively electric and you can feel this electricity in the air around you. The world becomes a technicolor place filled with eccentric characters who make life fun and exhilarating. You will have a strong sense of adventure and be willing to take risks. If Uranus is in a less harmonious aspect, however, you may feel like you are on an elevator that is plummeting top speed to the ground.

Whatever sector of your chart Uranus transits, will push you to express your individuality and discover new aspects of your own identity and the world. You may have a tendency towards rebellion and may want to upset the status quo as your search for integrity is more important than consensus. You will have a desire to act in a unique way. You will cut all things and behaviors that have become stagnant from your life. You will be interested in change and the new. Sometimes you may throw the baby out with the bath water, so try to become aware of the consequences before you act.

Uranus can bring a lot of instability to the sector of the chart it is transiting, as well as some erratic behaviour. It takes Uranus about 7 years to transit one house (and a bit longer than 80 years to cycle through the entire zodiac). These will therefore be mostly once-in-a-lifetime experiences. All this change can be quite confusing and lead to feelings of anxiety and panic attacks. Uranus can stay in contact to a point in your birth chart for as long as 6-months at any given time, taking a year to a year-and-a-half to work its way totally through a particular transit. During this period, be aware that this too shall pass; sometimes just knowing the date a transit will end can bring comfort. Try also to practice meditation or yoga, and cut out unnecessary stimulants such as caffeine.

During a Uranian transit it is best to stay flexible, keep a zen attitude, go with the flow, and most importantly, expect the unexpected.

Transiting Uranus in your first house from 01/01/2010 until: 03/06/2010

Your personality may be all over the place during this transit, which lasts for about 7 years. Uranus, the planet of change, has just passed over your Ascendant and entered the first house of your birthchart, marking the start of an 80 year cycle. This is a momentous period where you will become aware that the way you interact with the world is no longer valid. Any patterns of behaviour that you relied on, such as charm or control, in order to get your way may no longer fit the bill. A new type of you is now necessary. This is a period when your identity and the way you appear to the world will undergo massive, sudden alterations. It may seem as if you are trying on the cloak of several different personas to see which one will fit you the best.

This may be a confusing time for you as well as those around you who cannot understand who they are dealing with. It is best to approach this as a period of personal experimentation and try to stay away from making too many promises or commitments to others that you cannot keep. During this period, you may come off as unreliable, flakey, or even downright weird. You may want to express the more eccentric sides of your behaviour. This can leave you feeling liberated and free, especially if you spent a lifetime being repressed and in control. Rebellion could be a problem, as your desire to shake up the status quo and leave your mark is quite strong.

This can also be a heady time filled with much excitement. Your enthusiasm can be quite infectious, if short-lived, and you can sweep people up only to let them down when you move off to your next thing. You may get bored easily and try to tackle many things at once, only to lose focus and not follow through on anything. You may feel as if you are on a never ending roller-coaster and there may be many half-abandoned paths along the route. The best way to deal with this energy is to follow your inner-voice, express yourself and try not to make commitments to those around you.

At the end of this transit, you will finally gain your footing and have a better sense of who you are and what is really important to you.

Transiting Uranus in your second house from 03/06/2010 until: 07/01/2010

The second house, the sector of financial and emotional stability, meets Uranus, the planet of instability. A pretty powerful combo. During this transit, you may undergo swings of fortune in regards to your income. You may receive a lot of money quite suddenly. As the second house rules earned income, this will most likely come in regards for payment for services rendered. Either you get a new, better-paying job or you receive greater profits than you expected for an existing one. Alternatively, you may lose a source of income without warning. You may have career highs just before plummeting to all time lows. During this period, it is important not to rest on one's laurels but to work hard and save in order to keep a solid bank balance at all times. You may feel like splurging a lot on extravagant luxury items. Try to rein in this desire and keep things to the necessities. A little present every once in a while won't hurt, but you have to be careful not to spend everything all at once, banking on an income that may not be as stable as it seems. It is best to be well prepared for unexpected financial events. This period could call for great flexibility where you be tested to think on your feet. Be on the look out for new opportunities and take an entrepreneurial approach. You will be in the mood for risk, and these can often pay off, but it is best if you have a solid enough bank balance which can absorb the losses for the times you do lose. You may want to chuck it all in and start your own business. There is nothing wrong with this, but make sure you have the savings to fund this before quitting your day job.

This period could also see your self-confidence be all over the dial. To the outside world, you will appear to have it all under control, but inwardly you may be feeling on top of the world one day only to be wracked by fear and doubt the next. You will feel as if you have no control over your outward experience, and this may manifest itself in the form of panic attacks, anxiety or a general feeling of nervousness. If you have built your identity on material successes, you may now need to let go of these and be judged on your own merit. This could be extremely trying at first, but ultimately it is quite liberating, as you will no longer need external guideposts as measurements for success.

By the end of this 7-year transit, you will learn to stand on your own two feet without the support or approval of others. Outward measures of success will become meaningless to you as you develop your own inner-compass that will guide you and give you the self-assurance you need to fight your worldly battles.

The "transiting Uranus opposite your natal Uranus" is one of the most important aspects in our lives, occurring in our early 40s. Pay particular attention to the description of this transit if you are undergoing it.

Transiting Uranus in Opposition with your Mars

During this transit you may feel like you are being attacked on all sides which could provoke you into acting in a volatile or rash manner. You may feel like you are being hemmed in and that people aren't accepting you or your ideas. You may develop a certain rebellious streak during this time in your fight against the status quo and powers that be. You need to be concerned of your losing your cool and a general lack of patience which will only add to your feelings of frustration and impotence. You may become quite vexed as there is much you want to accomplish yet there is little support, or things may move slowly, losing steam.

You will have a hard time focussing your energy at this point, having many things in the fire but unable to concentrate on one thing and following it through to completion. You may have moments of intense energy which you dispel in a rushed, erratic manner. You tend to act without thinking, hoping everything will work out in the end. This would be a good time to remember that a little strategy and cool-headedness can get you further than a willy-nilly approach.

You may have a tendency to run roughshod over other people during this transit and have a hard time with empathy. Your attitude may cause those around you to dig in their heels only exasperating the problem.

Try to slow it down and look to reason and a methodical approach and you will find you will accomplish much more if you just allow for a little patience.

Transiting Uranus in Sextile with your Jupiter

You may feel a sudden reawakening to the possibilities of life under this transit. If you were living with your mind focussed on day-to-day pressures, you will be able to look beyond the ordinary world and get back in touch with the more poetic and universal aspects of life. New experiences, opportunities and interesting people may come on the scene which will expand your vision and worldview. You can feel a renewed faith in the goodness of humanity and life can seem quite beautiful, indeed. This can be a period of personal growth and renaissance, when you feel the rush and excitement of new experience.

All of this will also renew your idealism and optimism; you will feel at one with humanity, and the world. Use this time to explore new avenues and try to meet as many new people as you can. The more open and mobile you are the more you can profit from this energizing vibe. Any restrictions you may have felt will dissolve, and you can approach life with the innocence and wonder of a child.

Transiting Uranus in Sextile with your Saturn

This is a time when you can balance your longing for freedom and stability and create a working world that expresses both of these aspects in harmony. There may be sudden changes in your life, but ones that do not cause stress but bring greater stability. You should have the energy and open-mindedness at this time to take advantage of all the opportunities that are thrown your way, and work hard and with passionate gusto to go after goals that will serve as a solid foundation for years to come.

This will leave you with a great sense of accomplishment, and help to heal any self-esteem or anxiety issues you may have. The meaning of the transiting Neptune

The effect of Neptune can be quite nebulous, causing considerable vagueness in the sector of the chart it is transiting. Neptune takes about 14 years to transit a house. During this time, this hazy feeling can be quite subtle; it's as if you just can never get a clear, objective glimpse at this area of your life. Neptune dissolves anything it touches and you may feel plagued by uncertainty and the underlying suspicion that things are wrong, but you can't put your finger on the exact cause.

Neptune is the planet of illusion and when it travels through a sector of your chart we may find ourselves drawn to experiences and people that normally would have no sway over us. When the transit is over you may look back at this period and wonder "What was I thinking?" If you have had any problems with drugs or alcohol, you should pay particular attention to challenging Neptune transits, because your desire to escape and erase your identity through any means necessary will be quite strong.

Neptune can lead to an identity crisis of sorts as it breaks down the clear boundaries of the ego. One may lose touch with one's own desires and wants. This can lead to feelings of insecurity and being lost in the woods. Unconscious fears and even paranoia may spring up, clouding one's ability to make decisions and act positively.

Neptune can open up the gateway to introspection, and the best way to work with this energy is to look inward. When Neptune is making a challenging aspect, even the most diehard people against psychology could gain a lot through therapy. It is a time when you can truly see how patterns of behaviour instilled at a young age can affect your adult life. While everything else is cloudy, this should be startlingly clear and you can make a lot of insights at this time.

When Neptune is making a harmonious transit, it will be like looking at the world through rose-tinted glasses. Things can be quite idealistic, romantic and poetic. You could live out some very sweet, artistic times under the spell of Neptune. Your generosity will be quite heightened as the boundaries between you and others are weakened and you feel part of the universal whole.

The "Transiting Neptune in square with your natal Neptune" is another of life's most important transits, happening around the age of 41. Pay particular attention to this part of the report if you are undergoing this transit.

Transiting Neptune in your first house

from 01/01/2010 until: 07/01/2010

You may slowly be losing grips with reality during Neptune's 14-year transit of your first house. Your identity may slowly lose its defined parameters until it gets to the point that others have no idea who you really are or what you stand for. You may become a virtual shadow of yourself, caught up in a dream world of desire and illusion, becoming increasingly out of touch with the reality of your situation. You may no longer have any clear idea what delineates the boundaries of your own identity or what makes you tick. You have a tendency to drown in pie-in-the-sky idealism as the world collapses around you, not becoming aware of the fact that not all is well until it is too late.

Neptune also brings with it the power to charm others and get them swept up and enmeshed in your dreams and ideals. The problem is people may not stick around for long when they wise up to the fact that there is no basis in reality to anything you are holding forth.

You may feel like you are inhabiting a dream world, and your powers of sensitivity are high. You pick up so many vibes that you become stagnant when you must make a choice. You need to be careful of trying to be all things to all people. Your own sense of self is very permeable so you have a tendency to come off as a mirror mimicking the desires of who ever you happen to be with at the time.

During this period, it is extremely important that you surround yourself with people who have known you for a long time and act as an anchor to your hot air balloon. They will serve as reference points when you are in danger of floating too far away and will help remind you who you really are. If you ever wanted to try therapy to solidly define your true self, this would be a good time to do so.

Transiting Neptune in Opposition with your Uranus

You may want change in your life but are unsure how to go about achieving it. Feelings of confusion may make you hesitant to take any action as you become overwhelmed with the idea of the many possible outcomes of those actions. Your fear of being ostracized or blamed for bad results may prohibit you from asserting your goals or identity. You need to be careful that you don't escape into a dreamworld or the world of drugs and alcohol to alleviate the stresses of everyday existence.

Your life will probably be surrounded by continually altering circumstances that leave you indecisive about how to proceed. It is best not to make long-term plans because the environment is sure to shift and you will have to find a new strategy. You may even be going through a crisis of nerves or self-doubt because you just can't judge with certainty the environment around you. Everything is just too vague and hazy.

Eventually this unending sea of change and uncertainty will make you question the fundamental meaning of life. Things that seemed important just a short time ago can now appear absurdly irrelevant; you have been put on the path to deeper meaning. This can be a deeply psychological time, and if you take the courage to delve into your psyche you can wrestle deeply entrenched demons. You may feel like a ship tossed by unpredictable storms, without a rudder or any harbor to call home. Try not to allow yourself to get too insecure and instead focus on the things that bring meaning and structure to your life. It is time to look beyond the ephemeral and tap into the eternal and universal. When you plug into this deeper understanding, your heightened awareness will serve you well in the everyday world.

Transiting Neptune in Square with your MC

from 06/01/2010 until: 07/01/2010

Your ideals may be at odds with the Machiavellian machinations of the workplace. You long for a utopian world where we can all hold hands and sing Kumbaya. Reality, however, is a darker place and sometimes, to get to the top, you have to get your hands dirty and force issues. There is a danger here that you can cling to your quixotic ideals in the delusion it all will all work out in the end. It is time to check in with reality and have a more pragmatic strategy for reaching your career goals. You may escape into a fantasy land to flee the hard work that is needed to realise your grandiose visions.

That is not to say that you should sell your soul in order to achieve your ambitions. It is important at this time to move slowly and set a series of small but obtainable goals. You may have a tendency to promise more than you can provide and then just give up trying. You will find that even small steps every day towards your dream will enable you to achieve a lot of concrete success without getting overwhelmed. Small successes will go a long way to building up your rather shattered sense of self-esteem.

Your own sense of personal power may feel weakened in comparison to colleagues or bosses and you may be hesitant to stick up for your self. You may feel like you are totally on the wrong path and just want to give up and start all over. It is important that you stay grounded and focussed as well as in touch with that really motivates you. You may actually feel like you are dissolving at the office, like your voice doesn't count and you don't even exist. It is important that you practice non-defensive self-assertion techniques.

This transit can take a year to two years to completely work its way out of your system. It will most likely be a slow burn of a transit gathering force over time. If you are just entering this phase, you may want to write down your goals, as well as your strengths and weaknesses so you can go back and get in touch with the reality of your ambition when you are later feeling a bit lost.

The meaning of the transiting Pluto

Pluto is the granddaddy of all astrological transits. When Pluto makes contact to a point in your birthchart, it will bring about complete and total regeneration. Pluto moves very slowly, taking over 250 years to make one revolution through the entire zodiac, so over the course of a lifetime Pluto may only travel through 4 or 5 houses in one's birthchart. It can take from 10-to-25 years for Pluto to transit a house, and a transit to a birth planet will take a full 2 years for it to work itself out. Pluto transits define eras in our lives and once Pluto starts making its mark there is no going back. You will be most acutely aware of this transit and there will be no escaping the changes going on all around you. Pluto basically razes to the ground all structures in our lives that no longer serve their purpose and have us start from scratch. In a harmonious transit, this can be quite life enforcing, but in a more stressful transit things may seem quite overwhelming at times.

Pluto rules control issues and, during this time, it is important to let go and not cling too hard to concepts of power that serve no real purpose. You may have a desire to completely domineer everything around you, but this will only make things more difficult. Try to step away and see how your attempts may seem like downright bullying. Pluto also deals with anger. Even if you have been a serene individual all your life, you may develop a hair-trigger anger during a Pluto transit. Be careful not to alienate others with your browbeating behaviour. Power issues and imbalances of all kinds become high-lighted during a Pluto phase. You may also become the victim of another person's domineering ways, and rage may act as a defense mechanism to deal with their tyranny. Try not to allow yourself to get swept into another's drama and instead learn and practice techniques of non-defensive communication.

The best way to deal with this transit is to let go and detach yourself. Realise you cannot control every aspect of your life and that chaos is a natural part of creation. Pluto transits will be a time when chickens come home to roost and you realise you need to account for past behaviour where you did not treat others respectfully. Change will inevitably happen under a Pluto transit, so it is best to meet it halfway.

The effects of Pluto can seem devastating, almost violent at times. After this transit is over, you will be surprised at how you have become a completely new individual.

One Pluto transit the "Transiting Pluto square your natal Pluto" is one of the most important transits in astrology, occurring around the age of 35 and the first of the so-called mid-life transits. It's when we are forced to admit we are now adults and can no longer hide behind the excuse of youthful indiscretion. If you are undergoing this transit, pay particular attention to this section of the report.

Transiting Pluto in your eleventh house

The 11th house rules how we interact with society at large, be they social groups of friends or other networks. It is also the house of our ideals, hopes and vision of the future. During Pluto's transit of this sector, you will have a heightened awareness of your place in the group and what this means to you. There may be power struggles and estrangements along the way. You may meet powerfully influential people during this time, who can greatly assist you in achieving your goals in life. At the same time, however, you have to be careful not to sell your soul to get there. During this period, you may find your sense of personal power either heightened or limited but somehow always at the whim of the group. This can lead to great frustration, and you may try to wrest back control, alienating those around you. Power struggles and arguments could come between you and your friends. You may also find yourself surrounded by others who are just out to use you. It may be difficult for you to adapt to the group dynamic at this point in time, and you may find yourself feeling alienated and abandoned amidst the throng. The groups you align yourself with will greatly change during this period, as well as profoundly changing you. This may all sound quite daunting, but what is happening is a major shift that will allow you to surround yourself with a much more like-minded group of people which, in the end, is a very positive thing indeed.

Your ideals and goals may also undergo a profound alteration during this time. You may either experience a lot of increased personal power or you may have it sapped from you. You need to watch out for a creeping cynicism which may overtake you gradually. What you wish for in life may significantly alter over time, so it is best not to make too many promises. You may need to give up your own ego-driven goals for the good of the collective.

During this transit, it is best to be aware of who exactly it is you allow into your life, and what it is they want from you in return – it will be highly unlikely that there are no strings attached. You may become jaded because all your social interactions may seem more like transactions where all generosity is traded on a quid pro quo basis. Make sure you do not alienate yourself from old friends who can offer much needed advice, as can your family, who will be the one little group you can fully trust at this period.
